Woodland Animals

A photograph of a burrow entrance in the ground. The entrance is a dark, circular hole in the soil. The surrounding soil is brown and appears to be a mix of sand and silt. Several light-colored roots are visible, extending from the top left towards the entrance. To the right of the entrance, there is a large, light-colored log or piece of wood. The ground surface is covered with dry, brown grass and some small green plants. The word "Burrow" is written in white text across the center of the image.
